

Dr. Csaba ERDEI

Deputy Head of Department

Public Procurement Supervisory Department

National Development Agency

I graduated at the Faculty of Law and Political Sciences of the Pázmány Péter Catholic University in 2005, I have a qualification of public procurement referent and I passed the bar examination.

From September 2005, I worked at the Development Directorate of the Ministry of Environment and Water, initially as a project manager and later as an employee of the Independent Legal Department.

I participated in the preparation and conduct of contract award procedures, in the control - integrated in a process - of public procurements carried out using support. My tasks also included drawing up opinions relating to legal issues outside the scope of public procurement, particularly concerning infrastructural investments for the purposes of environmental protection and public utilities.

From February 2011, I've been working at the Public Procurement Supervisory Department of the National Development Agency, initially as the Head of the Enforcement Section and currently as a Deputy Head of Department. My professional interests and duties are particularly connected with the control - integrated in a process - of public procurements of great value and with the coordination - in terms of public procurement - of European and national regulatory controls, which fall within the competence of the Department.
